Our Principal, Professor Manoj Sinha started the event by addressing the efforts and contribution by Bhatt foundation towards the college and how much it meant to the students of Aryabhatta college.

Mr. Bhatt, representing the Bhatt Foundation, unveiled a revolutionary development – a wearable ring capable of monitoring various health parameters. This ingenious technology promises to transform healthcare by offering continuous and non-invasive health tracking. While details on specific functionalities remain undisclosed, the ring's potential to empower individuals with real-time health insights is undeniable.

Mrs. Bhatt's contribution focused on the critical issue of cervical cancer in women. Her address likely explored the challenges of early detection and potential preventative strategies. While the specific solutions she proposed are unknown, her focus on this often-overlooked health concern undoubtedly ignited important discussions.

The summit resonated deeply, serving as a powerful reminder of the tremendous impact social entrepreneurs can have on healthcare. Both Mr. Bhatt's wearable technology and Mrs. Bhatt's focus on cervical cancer exemplify the diverse ways social entrepreneurs are tackling critical health challenges. The event undoubtedly fostered inspiration and collaboration among the students of Aryabhatta College, University of Delhi.
